About the project:

“Our Food. Our Future” brings together 23 civil society organizations in 20 countries across Europe and the world. We will build a strong coalition of young people across Europe and work together in the pursuit of our common vision: A socially just and sustainable food system.

A food system, which is human rights-based and agroecological. A system in which food sovereignty and migrant workers’ rights have become reality. Together we raise awareness of the ecological impact as well as the injustices and inequalities that workers and their families, smallholders, and migrants experience as they produce and transport the food we eat. The European youth and their demand for change are the powerful force behind our campaign. Together we will build a large participatory movement, question our consumption habits, and build pressure on legislators, supermarkets, and food companies to finally bring about large-scale system change.
