CONCEPT NOTE

Civil Society Workshop in Advance of the High-Level International Conference on Human Rights, Civil Society and Counter-Terrorism

9 May 2022 | 09:00 – 12:30 (CET)
Málaga, Spain

➔ Background

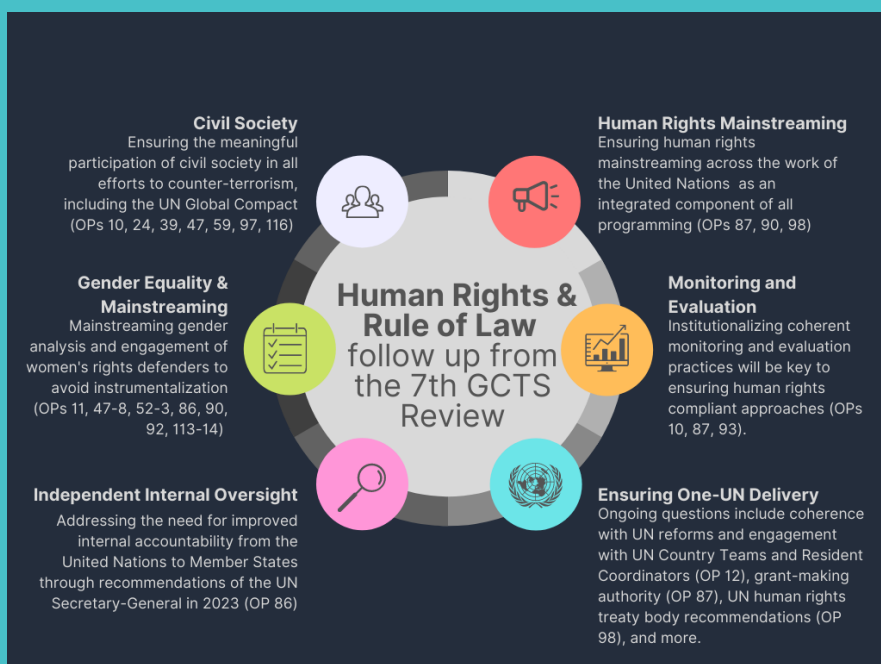

In June 2021, the United Nations General Assembly concluded the 7th Biennial Review of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy (7th GCTS Review). The balanced implementation of Pillar IV on human rights and rule of law was a top priority among discussions, as there remains little to no data-based evidence on how counter-terrorism measures are contributing to greater human rights and rule of law outcomes, nor how counter-terrorism measures, including those carried out by the United Nations, mainstream human rights, rule of law, gender equality, and civil society engagement. For these reasons, the Strategy integrated strengthened language on human rights and rule of law, civic space and civil society, gender and advancing women's roles, specifically preventing their instrumentalization, and more.

The Strategy, through the positive leadership of its co-facilitators and many Member States, also catalyzed robust institutional discussions on the future of counter-terrorism at the United Nations, contemplating interlinked next steps to ensure balanced implementation of the Strategy and its four pillars, particularly the full scope of Pillar IV, which requires meaningful participation and engagement with civil society to promote and protect their rights and civic space. The allocation and appropriation of sufficient funding and independent oversight were intricately linked to the pressing concerns among Member States, civil society, and human rights bodies on the status of implementation of human rights due diligence and mainstreaming in the field of counter-terrorism.

The below Figure 1.1 highlights a range of issues that were central priorities to civil society, the United Nations, and most importantly, Member States who adopted the 7th Review of the Strategy. These thematic areas and the demonstrated linkages between them during the 7th Review require continued follow up on implementation.

CONCEPT NOTE

Objectives

The event and its lead-up activities will be an iterative process aimed at articulating civil society priorities and concrete recommendations within the framework of the ongoing implementation of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy and its forthcoming 8th Review in 2023, including on topics of human rights mainstreaming, due diligence, rule of law, gender inequality, prevention, inclusion, and more.

1

Expanding the pool of civil society representatives actively engaged with the United Nations system and Member States on issues of human rights, rule of law, gender equality, and the linkages to counter-terrorism globally, including through the work of the United Nations.

2

Supporting civil society to meaningfully and collectively contribute to the next phases of implementation of the Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy through improved partnerships, visibility and contribution to policy recommendations made at the High-Level Conference at Málaga.

3

Facilitating a platform for civil society to advance existing recommendations and contribute to consolidating recommendations and priorities from a wide pool of diverse civil society representatives and organizations, including recommendations to the United Nations and Member States.

Logistics

This event is co-organized by the Kingdom of Spain and the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism in advance of the High-Level International Conference on Human Rights, Civil Society, and Counter-Terrorism held in Malaga, Spain from 10-11 May 2022.

Participation Details

The event will be held in-person and include all civil society representatives joining the High-Level Malaga Conference. The event will include a hybrid function to ensure that civil society representatives engaged in the preparation and discussions in advance of the Convening may contribute to the discussions and outcome.
