Foreword

by UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Volker Türk

People of African descent have played a pivotal role throughout history, fighting for change to shape societies.

Yet around the world, and despite some progress, the majority of people of African descent still live with the consequences of generations of oppression. They are among the poorest and most marginalised of our communities, often denied some of the most fundamental human rights: education, decent work, quality and affordable healthcare, or adequate housing. For people of African descent, racism can be a daily reality, shamefully manifested in so many ways, including racial profiling, racist attacks and shocking rates of police violence.

The International Decade for People of African Descent (2015-2024) may soon be drawing to a close, but its goals are as important as ever. We have a chance to address and redress longstanding and deep-rooted prejudices and violence, to end the systemic racism prevalent in too many countries, and radically to transform the structures and institutions which perpetuate it. And we must take concrete steps to confront the painful legacies of the past, including colonialism and enslavement.

Some achievements have been made in the last years. In 2020, the UN General Assembly proclaimed 31 August as the International Day for People of African Descent in recognition and celebration of their diverse heritage and contributions to the development of our societies. And the Permanent Forum on People of African Descent, which gathered for the first time in 2022, is a historic platform for their voices finally to be heard.

Our reckoning with racial discrimination is long-overdue. Inequality and racism harm not only people but entire societies. They humiliate, drive division and fuel hate and violence. Pushing back – together – against the forces of discrimination and hatred has never been more urgent.

Recognition, justice and development lie at the core of the ambitions of this International Decade. We must all commit to making them a reality for people of African descent, everywhere, now and well beyond 2024.

Introduction

Promoting the respect, protection and fulfilment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms of people of African descent

In December 2013, the General Assembly of the United Nations adopted resolution 68/237, by which it proclaimed 2015 to 2024 to be the International Decade for People of African Descent. It also decided that the theme of the Decade would be “People of African descent: recognition, justice and development”. A year later, the General Assembly adopted a programme of activities for the implementation of the Decade which is reproduced in whole in this publication.

The International Decade for People of African Descent and its programme of activities is built on the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted at the third World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance held in Durban in 2001, and the International Year for People of African Descent in 2011.

The International Decade for People of African Descent offers a historic opportunity to underline the important contribution made by people of African descent to societies and to propose concrete measures to promote their full inclusion and combat racism and racial discrimination against them. The programme of activities recommends specific actions to be conducted during the Decade by States, in consultation and collaboration with People of African descent, but also by the international community and international and regional organizations.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights was appointed to act as coordinator of the International Decade for People of African Descent to follow up on the implementation of the activities outlined in its framework. In this capacity, the High Commissioner and his Office promote and raise awareness about the Decade and its programme of activities at headquarters and in field presences, organize regional meetings on the Decade and an annual fellowship programme for people of African descent, and prepare annual reports for the Secretary-General, among other activities.

At the international level, one of the most important achievements of the Decade so far has been the establishment of the Permanent Forum on People of African Descent by the General Assembly in 2021. The General Assembly also proclaimed 31 August as the International Day for People of African Descent. Additionally, work is underway to elaborate a United Nations Declaration on the promotion, protection and full respect of the human rights of people of African descent.

By proclaiming the International Decade for People of African Descent and adopting a comprehensive programme of activities, States and the international community committed to improving the lives of millions of people of African descent around the world. While there have been some promising and positive results, many have raised their voices to call on States and the international community to urgently accelerate their engagement and actions to implement the objectives and activities of the Decade before its end on 31st December 2024. A number of UN anti-racism mechanisms and bodies have called for the Decade to be extended beyond 2024.

ANNEX

Programme of activities for the implementation of the International Decade for People of African Descent

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Background

1. The International Decade for People of African Descent, to be observed from 2015 to 2024, constitutes an auspicious period of history when the United Nations, Member States, civil society and all other relevant actors will join together with people of African descent and take effective measures for the implementation of the programme of activities in the spirit of recognition, justice and development. The programme of activities recognizes that the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action is a comprehensive United Nations framework and a solid foundation for combating racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, and represents a new stage in the efforts of the United Nations and the international community to restore the rights and dignity of people of African descent.
2. The implementation of the programme of activities for the International Decade is an integral part of the full and effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and in compliance with the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (United Nations, Treaty Series, vol. 660, No. 9464) as the principal international instruments for the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance. Important synergies should therefore be achieved through the International Decade in the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.
3. The Durban Declaration and Programme of Action acknowledged that people of African descent were victims of slavery, the slave trade and colonialism, and continue to be victims of their consequences. The Durban process raised the visibility of people of African descent and contributed to a substantive advancement in the promotion and protection of their rights as a result of concrete actions taken by States, the United Nations, other international and regional bodies and civil society.
4. Regrettably, despite the above-mentioned advances, racism and racial discrimination, both direct and indirect, de facto and de jure, continue to manifest themselves in inequality and disadvantage. People of African descent throughout the world, whether as descendants of the victims of the transatlantic slave trade or as more recent migrants, constitute some of the poorest and most marginalized groups. Studies and findings by international and national bodies demonstrate that people of African descent still have limited access to quality education, health services, housing and social security. In many cases, their situation remains largely invisible, and insufficient recognition and respect has been given to the efforts of people of African descent to seek redress for their present condition. They all too often experience discrimination in their access to justice, and face alarmingly high rates of police violence, together with racial profiling. Furthermore, their degree of political participation is often low, both in voting and in occupying political positions.

5. People of African descent can suffer from multiple, aggravated or intersecting forms of discrimination based on other related grounds, such as age, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, social origin, property, disability, birth or other status.
6. The promotion and protection of human rights of people of African descent should be a priority concern for the United Nations. In this regard, the International Decade for People of African Descent is a timely and important initiative, a unique opportunity to underline the important contribution made by people of African descent to our societies and to propose concrete measures to promote their full inclusion and to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.

B. Theme of the International Decade

7. As proclaimed by the General Assembly in its resolution 68/237, the theme of the International Decade is "People of African descent: recognition, justice and development".

C. Objectives of the International Decade

8. Non-discrimination and equality before and of the law constitute fundamental principles of international human rights law, and underpin the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (Resolution 217 A (III)) and the main international human rights treaties and instruments. As such, the main objective of the International Decade should be to promote respect, protection and fulfilment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by people of African descent, as recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. This main objective can be achieved through the full and effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, the outcome document of the Durban Review Conference (see A/CONF.211/8, chap. I) and the political declaration commemorating the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (Resolution 66/3), and through the universal accession to or ratification of and full implementation of the obligations arising under the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and other relevant international and regional human rights instruments.
9. The International Decade shall focus on the following specific objectives:
 - (a) To strengthen national, regional and international action and cooperation in relation to the full enjoyment of economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights by people of African descent and their full and equal participation in all aspects of society;
 - (b) To promote a greater knowledge of and respect for the diverse heritage, culture and contribution of people of African descent to the development of societies;
 - (c) To adopt and strengthen national, regional and international legal frameworks in accordance with the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, and to ensure their full and effective implementation.

II. ACTIVITIES TO BE CONDUCTED DURING THE INTERNATIONAL DECADE

A. National level

10. States should take concrete and practical steps through the adoption and effective implementation of national and international legal frameworks, policies and programmes to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance faced by people of African descent, taking into account the particular situation of women, girls and young males, by, inter alia, the activities described below.

1. Recognition

(a) Right to equality and non-discrimination

11. States should:

- (a) Remove all obstacles that prevent their equal enjoyment of all human rights, economic, social, cultural, civil and political, including the right to development;
- (b) Promote the effective implementation of national and international legal frameworks;
- (c) Withdraw reservations contrary to the object and purpose of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, and consider withdrawing other reservations;
- (d) Undertake a comprehensive review of domestic legislation with a view to identifying and abolishing provisions that entail direct or indirect discrimination;
- (e) Adopt or strengthen comprehensive anti-discrimination legislation and ensure its effective implementation;
- (f) Provide effective protection for people of African descent, and review and repeal all laws that have a discriminatory effect on people of African descent facing multiple, aggravated or intersecting forms of discrimination;
- (g) Adopt, strengthen and implement action-oriented policies, programmes and projects to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance designed to ensure full and equal enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms by people of African descent; States are also encouraged to elaborate national plans of action to promote diversity, equality, equity, social justice, equality of opportunity and the participation of all;
- (h) Establish and/or strengthen national mechanisms or institutions with a view to formulating, monitoring and implementing policies to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and promoting racial equality, with the participation of representatives of civil society;
- (i) As appropriate, establish and/or strengthen independent national human rights institutions, in conformity with the Paris Principles (Resolution 48/134, annex), and/or similar mechanisms with the participation of civil society, and provide them with adequate financial resources, competence and capacity for protection, promotion and monitoring to combat racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.

(b) Education on equality and awareness-raising

12. States should:

- (a) Celebrate the launch of the International Decade at the national level, and develop national programmes of action and activities for the full and effective implementation of the Decade;
- (b) Organize national conferences and other events aimed at triggering an open debate and raising awareness on the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, with the participation of all relevant stakeholders, including government, civil society representatives and individuals or groups of individuals who are victims;
- (c) Promote greater knowledge and recognition of and respect for the culture, history and heritage of people of African descent, including through research and education, and promote full and accurate inclusion of the history and contribution of people of African descent in educational curricula;
- (d) Promote the positive role that political leaders and political parties, leaders of religious communities and the media could further play in fighting racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance by, inter alia, publicly recognizing and respecting the culture, history and heritage of people of African descent;
- (e) Raise awareness through information and education measures with a view to restoring the dignity of people of African descent, and consider making available the support for such activities to non-governmental organizations;
- (f) Support education and training initiatives for non-governmental organizations and people of African descent in the use of the tools provided by international human rights instruments relating to racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;
- (g) Ensure that textbooks and other educational materials reflect historical facts accurately as they relate to past tragedies and atrocities, in particular slavery, the slave trade, the transatlantic slave trade and colonialism, so as to avoid stereotypes and the distortion or falsification of these historical facts, which may lead to racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including the role of respective countries therein, by:
 - (i) Supporting research and educational initiatives;
 - (ii) Giving recognition to the victims and their descendants through the establishment of memorial sites in countries that profited from and/or were responsible for slavery, the slave trade, the transatlantic slave trade and colonialism and past tragedies where there is none, as well as at departure, arrival and relocation points, and by protecting related cultural sites.

(c) Information-gathering

- 13. In accordance with paragraph 92 of the Durban Programme of Action, States should collect, compile, analyse, disseminate and publish reliable statistical data at the national and local levels and take all other related measures necessary to assess regularly the situation of people of African descent who are victims of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.
- 14. Such statistical data should be disaggregated in accordance with national legislation, upholding the right to privacy and the principle of self-identification.
- 15. The information should be collected to monitor the situation of people of African descent, assess progress made, increase their visibility and identify social gaps. It should also be used to assess and guide the formulation of policies and actions to prevent, combat and eradicate racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance.

(d) Participation and inclusion

16. States should adopt measures to enable the full, equal and effective participation of people of African descent in public and political affairs without discrimination, in accordance with international human rights law.

2. Justice(a) Access to justice

17. States should take further measures, by:

- (a) Introducing measures to ensure equality before the law, notably in the enjoyment of the right to equal treatment before the tribunals and all other organs administering justice;
- (b) Designing, implementing and enforcing effective measures to eliminate the phenomenon popularly known as “racial profiling”;
- (c) Eliminating institutionalized stereotypes concerning people of African descent and applying appropriate sanctions against law enforcement officials who act on the basis of racial profiling;
- (d) Ensuring that people of African descent have full access to effective protection and remedies through the competent national tribunals and other State institutions against any acts of racial discrimination, and the right to seek from such tribunals just and adequate reparation or satisfaction for any damage suffered as a result of such discrimination;
- (e) Adopting effective and appropriate measures, including legal measures as appropriate, to combat all acts of racism, in particular the dissemination of ideas based on racial superiority or hatred, incitement to racial hatred, violence or incitement to racial violence, as well as racist propaganda activities and participation in racist organizations; States are also encouraged to ensure that such motivations are considered an aggravating factor for the purpose of sentencing;
- (f) Facilitating access to justice for people of African descent who are victims of racism by providing the requisite legal information about their rights, and providing legal assistance when appropriate;
- (g) Preventing and punishing all human rights violations affecting people of African descent, including violence, acts of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment, including those committed by State officials;
- (h) Ensuring that people of African descent, like all other persons, enjoy all the guarantees of a fair trial and equality before the law as enshrined in relevant international human rights instruments, and specifically the right to the presumption of innocence, the right to assistance of counsel and to an interpreter, the right to an independent and impartial tribunal, guarantees of justice, and all the rights to which prisoners are entitled;
- (i) Acknowledging and profoundly regretting the untold suffering and evils inflicted on millions of men, women and children as a result of slavery, the slave trade, the transatlantic slave trade, colonialism, apartheid, genocide and past tragedies, noting that some States have taken the initiative to apologize and have paid reparation, where appropriate, for grave and massive violations committed, and calling upon those that have not yet expressed remorse or presented apologies to find some way to contribute to the restoration of the dignity of victims;
- (j) Inviting the international community and its members to honour the memory of the victims of these tragedies with a view to closing those dark chapters in history and as a means of reconciliation and healing; further noting that some have taken the initiative of regretting or expressing remorse or presenting apologies, and calling upon all those that have not yet contributed to restoring the dignity of the victims to find appropriate ways to do so and, to this end, appreciating those countries that have done so;

- (k) Calling upon all States concerned to take appropriate and effective measures to halt and reverse the lasting consequences of those practices, bearing in mind their moral obligations.

(b) Special measures

18. The adoption of special measures, such as affirmative action, where appropriate, is essential to alleviating and remedying disparities in the enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms affecting people of African descent, protecting them from discrimination and overcoming persistent or structural disparities and de facto inequalities resulting from historical circumstances. As such, States should develop or elaborate national plans of action to promote diversity, equality, social justice, equality of opportunity and the participation of all. By means of, inter alia, affirmative or positive actions and strategies, these plans should aim at creating conditions for all to participate effectively in decision-making and to realize civil, cultural, economic, political and social rights in all spheres of life on the basis of non-discrimination.

3. Development

(a) Right to development and measures against poverty

19. Consistent with the Declaration on the Right to Development (Resolution 41/128, annex) States should adopt measures aimed at guaranteeing active, free and meaningful participation by all individuals, including people of African descent, in development and decision making related thereto and in the fair distribution of benefits resulting therefrom.
20. Recognizing that poverty is both a cause and a consequence of discrimination, States should, as appropriate, adopt or strengthen national programmes for eradicating poverty and reducing social exclusion that take account of the specific needs and experiences of people of African descent, and should also expand their efforts to foster bilateral, regional and international cooperation in implementing those programmes.
21. States should implement actions to protect ancestral groups of people of African descent.

(b) Education

22. States should take all necessary measures to give effect to the right of people of African descent, particularly children and young people, to free primary education and access to all levels and forms of quality public education without discrimination. States should:
- (a) Ensure that quality education is accessible and available in areas where communities of African descent live, particularly in rural and marginalized communities, with attention to improving the quality of public education;
- (b) Take measures to ensure that public and private education systems do not discriminate against or exclude children of African descent, and that they are protected from direct or indirect discrimination, negative stereotyping, stigmatization and violence from peers or teachers; to this end, training and sensitization should be provided to teachers and measures should be taken to increase the number of teachers of African descent working in educational institutions.

States should take measures to ensure that public and private education systems do not discriminate against or exclude children of African descent, and that they are protected from direct or indirect discrimination, negative stereotyping, stigmatization and violence from peers or teachers.

(c) Employment

23. States should take concrete measures to eliminate racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance in the workplace against all workers, in particular people of African descent, including migrants, and ensure the full equality of all before the law, including labour law, and eliminate barriers, where appropriate, to participation in vocational training, collective bargaining, employment, contracts and trade union activity; access to judicial and administrative tribunals dealing with grievances; seeking employment in different parts of their country of residence; and working in safe and healthy conditions.

(d) Health

24. States should take measures to improve access to quality health services for people of African descent.

(e) Housing

25. Recognizing the poor and insecure housing conditions in which many people of African descent live, States should develop and implement policies and projects as appropriate aimed at, inter alia, ensuring that they gain and sustain a safe and secure home and community in which to live in peace and dignity.

4. Multiple or aggravated discrimination

26. States should adopt and implement policies and programmes that provide effective protection for, and review and repeal all policies and laws that could discriminate against, people of African descent facing multiple, aggravated or intersecting forms of discrimination based on other related grounds, such as sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, social origin, property, birth, disability or other status.
27. States should mainstream a gender perspective when designing and monitoring public policies, taking into account the specific needs and realities of women and girls of African descent, including in the area of sexual and reproductive health and reproductive rights in accordance with the Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development,¹ the Beijing Platform for Action² and the outcome documents of their review conferences, and ensure adequate access to maternal health care.

1. Steps to be taken by the international community and international and regional organizations

28. The international community, international and regional organizations, in particular relevant United Nations programmes, funds, specialized agencies and other bodies, international financial and development institutions, and other international mechanisms within their areas of competence should give high priority to programmes and projects specifically tailored for combating racism and racial discrimination against people of African descent, taking fully into account the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, the outcome document of the Durban Review Conference, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and the political declaration of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, and should, inter alia:

List of United Nations human rights mechanisms mandated to work on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance

The Committee on the Elimination of All Form of Racial Discrimination is the body of 18 independent experts elected by States who oversees the implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination. The Convention is the first human rights treaty adopted in 1965. It entered into force in 1969 and specifies measures that State parties should take to eliminate racial discrimination.

The Committee holds three sessions per year, during which it reviews the implementation by States of obligations they have accepted under the Convention and publishes specific observations and recommendations that are made available to the public. State parties are expected to implement change and report back on their progress. The Committee also considers cases under its Early Warning and Urgent Action procedure to prevent serious human rights violations. The Committee can receive complaints about alleged violations of the Convention from individuals or groups of individuals, but only if their country has recognized its competence to do so. Also, people can send complaints only if they meet several conditions, including having first used the complaint procedures available in their country.

The Ad Hoc Committee on the Elaboration of Complementary Standards is an intergovernmental working group of the Human Rights Council. It is mandated to elaborate complementary standards in the form of either a convention or additional protocol(s) to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, filling the existing gaps in the Convention and providing new normative standards aimed at combating all forms of contemporary racism, including incitement to racial and religious hatred. Since 2017, the Committee has been working on the elaboration of draft additional protocol criminalizing acts of racist and xenophobic nature.

The Ad Hoc Committee holds its sessions annually. Member States, UN bodies and agencies, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations can all take part in these sessions. The Chairperson of the Ad Hoc Committee presents the session report to the Human Rights Council and updates the General Assembly on the Committee's progress each year.

The Special Rapporteur on contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, is an independent human rights expert appointed by the Human Rights Council. It is part of the human rights mechanism called the Special Procedures of the Human Rights Council whose mandate was established in 1993. The Special Rapporteur presents annual thematic reports to the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly which provide guidance and recommendations for UN Member States, civil society organizations and other stakeholders. The Special Rapporteur also submits annual reports on the glorification of Nazism, neo-Nazism and other practices that contribute to fuelling contemporary forms of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance to the Human Rights Council and to the General Assembly.

The Special Rapporteur undertakes fact-finding country visits at the invitation of governments. The final observations and recommendations are published in country visit reports presented to the Human Rights Council. The Special Rapporteur also sends communications (letters) to States to present allegations they have received of human rights violations and request clarification on them. Where necessary, the Special Rapporteur requests the concerned authorities to take actions to prevent or stop the violation, investigate it, bring to justice those responsible and make sure that remedies are available to the victim(s) or their families. In some cases, the Special Rapporteur issues public statements.

The Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action is an open-ended working group of the Human Rights Council established in 2002 to follow up on the effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA), adopted at the 2001 World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance. All UN Member and Observer States UN bodies and specialized agencies, inter-governmental organizations, non-governmental organizations with ECOSOC consultative status or accredited for the World Conference against Racism can attend its annual sessions.

The Intergovernmental Working Group presents reports on its sessions to the Human Rights Council, including specific recommendations to fight racism and racial discrimination, and oral updates to the General Assembly. In 2021, the General Assembly requested the Intergovernmental Working Group to devote at least half of its annual session to the elaboration of a draft United Nations declaration on the promotion and full respect of the human rights of people of African descent.

The Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent was established in 2002 by the Commission on Human Rights and the mandate has been subsequently renewed by the Human Rights Council in its resolutions. The Working Group is a Special Procedure of the Human Rights Council. It has five independent human rights experts appointed by the Human Rights Council to study the human rights situation of people of African descent and to make proposals for the elimination of racial discrimination. The Working Group undertakes fact-finding country visits at the invitation of governments. Its findings and recommendations are published in country visit reports presented to the Human Rights Council.

The Working Group also acts under its communications procedure, to write to States concerning cases and allegations received of human rights violations falling within their mandate. The Working Group requests that the concerned authorities take actions to prevent or stop the violation, investigate it, bring to justice those responsible and make sure that remedies are available to the victim(s) or their families. The Working Group also holds two annual sessions per year with participation of Member States, representatives of international organizations, and civil society. The Working Group presents annual thematic reports to the UN Human Rights Council and to the General Assembly which provide guidance and recommendations for UN member States, civil society organizations and other stakeholders.

The Group of Independent Eminent Experts on the Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, composed of five independent experts, was established by the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA) to follow the implementation of its provisions. The Group also functions as an advisory mechanism for the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly on the implementation of the DDPA and works towards mobilizing global political will for concrete action to implement the DDPA.

The Group holds regular sessions with the participation of States, UN bodies and specialized agencies, national human rights institutions, and non-governmental organizations to examine progress in the implementation of the DDPA. It presents reports on its sessions to the Human Rights Council or the General Assembly.

The International Independent Expert Mechanism to Advance Racial Justice and Equality in the context of Law Enforcement was established in 2021, further to the presentation of the High Commissioner's report on racial justice and equality (A/HRC/47/53), to foster transformative change for racial justice and equality in the context of law enforcement globally, especially where relating to the legacies of colonialism and the Transatlantic trade in enslaved Africans, to investigate governments' responses to peaceful anti-racism protests and all violations of international human rights law and to contribute to accountability and redress for victims. It consists of three independent experts with law enforcement and human rights expertise.

The Expert Mechanism holds an annual session and presents a yearly report to the Human Rights Council. It also conducts fact-finding country visits upon invitation from governments, providing specific observations and recommendations. The Expert Mechanism also conducts consultations with States, directly affected individuals and communities, and other stakeholders. It also follows up on specific incidents and situations.

The Permanent Forum on People of African Descent, established in 2021, is a consultative mechanism for people of African descent and other relevant stakeholders, a platform for improving the safety and quality of life and livelihoods of people of African descent, and an advisory body to the Human Rights Council. The Permanent Forum consists of ten members (independent experts) and meets once a year. All stakeholders advancing the rights of people of African descent, especially Member States, United Nations specialized agencies and bodies, national human rights institutions, equality bodies, civil society representatives, and organizations of people of African descent, are welcome to participate in the sessions and contribute to the discussions.

One of the mandates of the Permanent Forum of People of African Descent is to contribute to the elaboration of a draft United Nations Declaration on the promotion, protection and full respect of the human rights of people of African descent. In this regard, the Permanent Forum shared its preliminary contribution to the elaboration of the draft Declaration at the 20th session of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the Effective Implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action, held in October 2022.
