

Great Britain: Equality and Human Rights Commission

Submission to midterm progress report of the third phase (2015-2019) of the World Programme for Human Rights Education

The Equality and Human Rights Commission has recently revamped its human rights pages, so if you go to our main website (URL: <https://www.equalityhumanrights.com/en>), and click on the “human rights” tab, you will see the resources we have available. In the “What are human rights?” section, we have produced a video explaining what human rights are and how they came about. We also have a section called ‘Human rights stories’ with videos of how individuals have used human rights to improve their lives, produced by Equally Ours, a campaigning network of human rights charities. There is also a section on the Universal Declaration, with a video produced by Amnesty International, and a section on the European Convention.

In addition the Equality and Human Rights Commission has produced an education resource for secondary schools on equality and human rights, called Equal Rights, Equal Respect. This is one of our most popular downloads, and has 12 lesson plans, four videos, a number of additional resources for schools such as assembly plans, and training resources for trainee teachers. The URL is <https://www.equalityhumanrights.com/en/secondary-education-resources>. We have some training videos for teachers and teacher trainers that may well be of interest, at the following URL: <https://www.equalityhumanrights.com/en/secondary-education-resources/training/video-training>. These resources are some of the most frequently downloaded on our website.
