Durban Follow-up

From 22-26 June 2009, the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent undertook an official visit to Ecuador. The Working Group noted that due to structural racism Afro-Ecuadorians, have been historically excluded from gaining access to higher education, promotion to higher ranks of state administration and decision-making bodies and that the government may need to rectify this situation by considering adopting affirmative action measures and a special legislation on non-discrimination. During their visit to the communities of Cenepa on Trinitaria Island and Batalla de Tarqui, both in Guayaquil, the members of the Working Group were particularly concerned by the abject poverty of these communities and the plight of the women and children that they met. In the province of Esmeraldas, Afro-Ecuadorian youths are additionally affected by high levels of violence, as a result of the influence of illegal armed actors and an illicit drug trade. The Working Group also held meetings with several Afro-Ecuadorian organisations, through which it became clear that there is a need to highlight their culture and heritage and underline its importance in Ecuadorian history and national heritage.

The next sessions of the Intergovernmental Working Group on the effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action (DDPA) is planned for 5-16 October 2009, while that of the Ad Hoc Committee on Complementary Standards is scheduled for 19-30 October 2009.

Treaty Bodies and country reviews

13 to 31 July 2009 - HRC

The Human Rights Committee held its 96th session from 13 to 31 July 2009, during which it considered State reports of the United Republic of Tanzania, the Netherlands, Chad, and Azerbaijan. In addition, Country Report Task Forces have met and adopted list of issues on reports submitted by Argentina, Ecuador, Mexico, New Zealand and Uzbekistan.

In its concluding observations on the State report submitted by Tanzania, the Committee expressed concern that the State party does not recognize the existence of indigenous peoples and minorities in its territory and regretted the lack of information about certain vulnerable ethnic groups. It recommended the Government carry out, as a matter of urgency, a study on minorities and indigenous communities living on its territory, and adopt specific legislation and special measures to protect, preserve and promote their cultural heritage and traditional way of life.

In its concluding observations on the State report submitted by the Netherlands, the Committee expressed concern at reports of discrimination against minorities in the workplace, including in recruitment and selection. The Committee recommended the Dutch government take active steps to ensure ethnic minorities have equal access to employment opportunities, particularly through awareness campaigns for the private sector and through adequate publicizing of employment opportunities in the public sector among minority communities.

In relation to the State report submitted by Azerbaijan, the Committee expressed concern at the lack of information on minorities and regret at the absence of clarification by the delegation as to the steps taken to address significant concerns, in particular the reductions in the legal guarantees relating to the protection of minorities in the State party's Law on the State Language (2002) and the absence of consultative structures for representatives of minorities in the State party (art. 27). The Committee urged the State to ensure that members of minorities enjoy their rights in full compliance with article 27 of the Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and recommended the State party create a national consultative organ including representatives of minorities, and translate the report and the concluding observations into the main minority languages spoken in Azerbaijan.

20 July to 7 August 2009 - CEDAW

The Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women held its 44th session from 20 July to 7 August 2009, during which it considered State reports of Azerbaijan, Bhutan, Denmark, Guinea Bissau, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Japan, Liberia, Spain, Switzerland, Timor Leste, and Tuvalu.

The Committee expressed regret at the lack of information and statistics concerning minority women in Japan, as well as the lack of any proactive measures, such as policy framework, to promote their rights. The Committee recommended the Japanese state take effective measures, including the adoption of a policy framework and temporary special measures, such as appointing minority women representatives to decision-making bodies, to combat discrimination against minority women. The Committee further reiterated its request that the Japanese State includes in its next periodic State party report information on minority women, particularly with regard to education, employment, health, social welfare and exposure to violence. The Committee also called for a comprehensive study on the situation of minority women in Japan, particularly from the Ainu, Buraku, Zainichi Korean and Okinawa communities.

The Committee further expressed concern on persistent media stereotyping and negative portrayals of ethnic minority women in Switzerland. The Committee recommended targeted measures for the media and educational system to promote more positive images of ethnic minority women and women from migrant backgrounds. The Committee called on the State party to review these measures and include information on this matter in its next State party periodic report. The Committee also expressed concern about employment discrimination against women from non-Western ethnic minority and migrant backgrounds, particularly as compared to the treatment of European Union, US and Canadian women in Switzerland, and about new provisions for married women required by the Foreign National Act, which might pose difficulties for victims of violence to acquire or renew Swiss residency permits. The Committee called upon the State to take effective measures to end discrimination against minority and migrant-background women, and to monitor the effects of its laws on migrant communities.

In relation to the report submitted by Spain, the Committee expressed concern about the lack of positive media portrayals of minority women, including Romani women and women of migrant backgrounds. The Committee called upon Spain to strengthen its anti-discrimination efforts, particularly through the adoption of targeted measures to promote positive images of ethnic minority women in the media and educational system. The Committee also expressed regret about a general lack of comprehensive data and information on the situation of ethnic minority women with respect to education, health, employment and social and political participation. The Committee recommended the Spanish government collect data on this issue and present it in its next State party periodic report.

3 August to 28 August 2009 - CERD

The Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination held its 75th session from 3 to 28 August 2009, during which it considered State reports from Azerbaijan, Chad, Chile,

China, Columbia, Ethiopia, Greece, Peru, Philippines, Poland and the United Arab Emirates.

It is observations on the State party report by Azerbaijan, the Committee commended the government's National Plan of Action for the Protection of Human Rights, including its provisions for strengthening dialogue between cultures and protecting the cultural heritage of national minorities. However, the Committee also expressed regret about the lack of current statistical data on the employment of members of ethnic minorities, and recommended Azerbaijan include such information in its next periodic report. The Committee further expressed concern about the absence of consultative structures for representatives of minorities that would give them a voice in the legislative process, and recommended the Azerbaijani government create a national consultative organ, which would include representatives of minorities, to encourage their participation in the decision-making process on policies that interest and affect them. Finally, the Committee expressed concern about a lack of information as to whether the government is providing education and instruction in Armenian for the 30,000 ethnic Armenians living in Azerbaijan. The Committee encouraged the Azerbaijani government to further examine this issue, and provide information in its next State party report.

In relation to the report submitted by China, the Committee welcomed the adoption of a National Human Rights Action Plan for 2009-2010 and its provisions for ethnic minorities. However, the Committee also expressed concern about the lack of statistical data available on the socio-economic status of ethnic minorities, and urged the Chinese government to include such information in their next State party report. The Committee further noted that the Chinese State has not adopted a comprehensive law against racial discrimination, and recommended the State adopt such a law at the national level to combat discrimination on the grounds of race, colour, descent or national or ethnic origin. The Committee additionally expressed concern at reports of incentive systems for workers to settle in minority regions, which could substantially alter the demographics of these regions and negatively affect local traditions and cultures. The issue of household registration was also noted by the Committee, which expressed concern that it is being used for de-facto discrimination against ethnic minorities. The Committee suggested the Chinese government review these policies. In addition, the Committee expressed concern that policies on administrative detention and re-education through labour are being applied disproportionately in relation to members of ethnic minorities, and requested further information on this topic. The Committee also recommended the Chinese government intensify its efforts to increase participation of all minority groups in public service, political life and economic growth, and whilst taking into account the intersectionality between ethnicity and religion, ensure the respect for the right of all ethnic groups to enjoy freedom of religion. To this end, the Committee also requested the Chinese government strengthen its measures to reduce the high illiteracy rates amongst certain ethnic minorities, provide free and open access to health care services, and improve employment rates among ethnic minorities.

The Committee further commended the allotment of seats in the parliament to ethnic minority groups and the recognition of these groups under the Ethiopian Constitution. However, the Committee also registered its concern at reports of continuing caste-like racial discrimination against ethnic minorities. The Committee recommended the State undertake a study about the spread and causes of this pattern of discrimination, and take steps to combat it, providing further information on this issue in its next State party report.

In its concluding observations on the report submitted by Greece, the Committee took note of the Greek State's definition of minority being exclusively applied to the Muslim minority in Thrace, and called upon the Greek government to conduct research to assess and evaluate the incidences of racial discrimination affecting all groups based on national or ethnic origin, and take steps to eliminate such discrimination. In particular, the Committee requested more information about the Turkish, Pomak and Romani groups that form the Muslim minority in Thrace, and about the measures the government has taken to protect the identity and human rights of these groups. The Committee also expressed concern about reports of forced dissolution and refusal to register some associations having words such as "minority", "Turkish" or "Macedonian" in their titles. The Committee thus recommended that the State party adopt measures to ensure the effective enjoyment by persons belonging to every community or group of their right to freedom of association and of their cultural rights, including the use of mother languages. The Committee was also concerned with obstacles encountered by Roma and Turkish-speaking persons, particularly in access to employment, housing, health care and education, and recommended the Greek government adopt adequate measures to improve the living conditions and educational standards of these groups.

In relation to a report submitted by Poland, the Committee noted with appreciation the enactment of a Law on National Ethnic Minorities and Regional Language, aimed at protecting minority languages. However, the Committee remained concerned that the Romani population in Poland continues to suffer social marginalisation and high poverty levels. The Committee recommended the Polish State enhance its efforts towards the full integration of the Roma into Polish society through improvement of their living standards and poverty reduction. The Committee also requested statistical data on the life expectancy and poverty levels in Poland, disaggregated by region and ethnic group.

The Committee further expressed regret over the lack of statistical data on the rights enjoyed by ethnic minorities and indigenous peoples in the Philippines. The Committee recommended the State use the 2010 census to include indicators, disaggregated by ethnicity and gender on the basis of voluntary self-identification, and provide the information in their next State party report.
