WHAT FUNDING FOR WHAT DEVELOPMENT?

SIDE EVENT TO THE 2024 HUMAN RIGHTS COUNCIL SOCIAL FORUM

This side event will focus on the structural shifts that the 4th International Financing for Development Conference (FFD4, Sevilla, June 2025) needs to address to move us closer to an effective implementation of the right to development worldwide.

BACKGROUND

Decades of colonial extraction, followed by economic liberalization, deregulation, and privatization enforced by the IMF and World Bank, have strengthened corporate control over economies while weakening developing countries' ability to respond to crises. Public debt, illicit financial flows, and unfair tax rules drain resources, hindering efforts to achieve human rights, gender equality, and sustainable development. Disruptions in global supply chains, flexible labor schemes, and lack of social protection drive millions into poverty.

Neoliberal policies, backed by institutions like the World Bank, prioritize corporate profit over people's rights, widening inequality and reinforcing global power imbalances. To counter this, the current economic order must be replaced with a model that allows for a effective implementation of the right to development.
