

Report on the Contributions of Migrants to Societies: A Summary of reported media

Introduction:

This report on the human rights of migrants, examines the contributions of migrants to societies, polities, and economies worldwide. It highlights the positive impact of migrants while acknowledging the challenges they face.

Key Findings:

- Migrants contribute significantly to societies in various ways, including through:
 - Economic contributions: remittances, trade, investment, innovation, and entrepreneurship.
 - Social contributions: cultural diversity, food security, and community engagement.
 - Civic contributions: participation in democratic processes and volunteering.
 - Despite their contributions, migrants often face discrimination, prejudice, and human rights violations.
 - Facilitating factors that help migrants contribute include:
 - Human rights-based policies: policies that respect and protect migrants' rights.
 - Integration programs: programs that help migrants learn the language, access services, and participate in society.
 - Positive media narratives: media coverage that portrays migrants accurately and positively.
 - Hindering factors that limit migrants' contributions include:
 - Discriminatory laws and policies: laws and policies that restrict migrants' access to rights and opportunities.
 - Negative media narratives: media coverage that portrays migrants negatively and fuels xenophobia.
 - Lack of access to services: lack of access to healthcare, education, and other essential services.
-

Recommendations:

- States and stakeholders should:
 - Implement human rights-based policies that protect migrants' rights.
 - Develop and implement integration programs that help migrants contribute to society.
 - Promote positive media narratives about migrants.
 - Address discriminatory laws and policies.
 - Ensure migrants have access to essential services.
 - Migrants and civil society should:
 - Advocate for their rights and contributions.
 - Work to change negative perceptions of migrants.
-

Conclusion:

Migrants make valuable contributions to societies, but they often face challenges. By implementing human rights-based policies and promoting positive integration, we can ensure that migrants can thrive and contribute their full potential.